Human Focus is a unique web-based compliance support service for health and safety that will both help to improve risk management and cut costs. Human Focus is provided either at no cost, or is heavily subsidised, as part of your AIG insurance policy.

The dual benefits of cost reduction and business improvement are partly achieved via the use of the latest web technologies. Costly administrative processes are automated; training is delivered on demand; and easy to use risk management tools can be accessed, for example, via mobile phones or other portable devices.

However, the really powerful aspect of Human Focus, the key to reducing costs whilst making improvements, is people power! Systems alone do not achieve safety – competent people are also required. If people at the sharp end know what they are doing then the high standards can be achieved – quickly and effectively. And so, the central component of Human Focus is one of the UK's largest health and safety E-learning systems. Employees who know what they are doing work faster, smarter and have fewer accidents!

Health & safety compliance does not have to be a costly nightmare

Human Focus is a combination of a web-based system supported via a UK call-centre. Each organisation is assigned their own highly secure online password protected account.

The web-application provides both an E-learning (training) system along with risk management tools for completing tasks such as risk assessments. This is a flexible service that can be moulded to suite needs of any organisation - whatever the size or activity.

Larger employers may want to selectively use training courses to fill gaps in existing arrangements. Conversely, smaller organisations may wish to use all aspects to build from scratch a risk management system.

However the system is used, trained operatives are on-hand to help you set-up and run the account. Health and safety specialists are also available via this helpline to answer specific questions or concerns.

A service that helps you to comply - at low cost and with minimal disruption

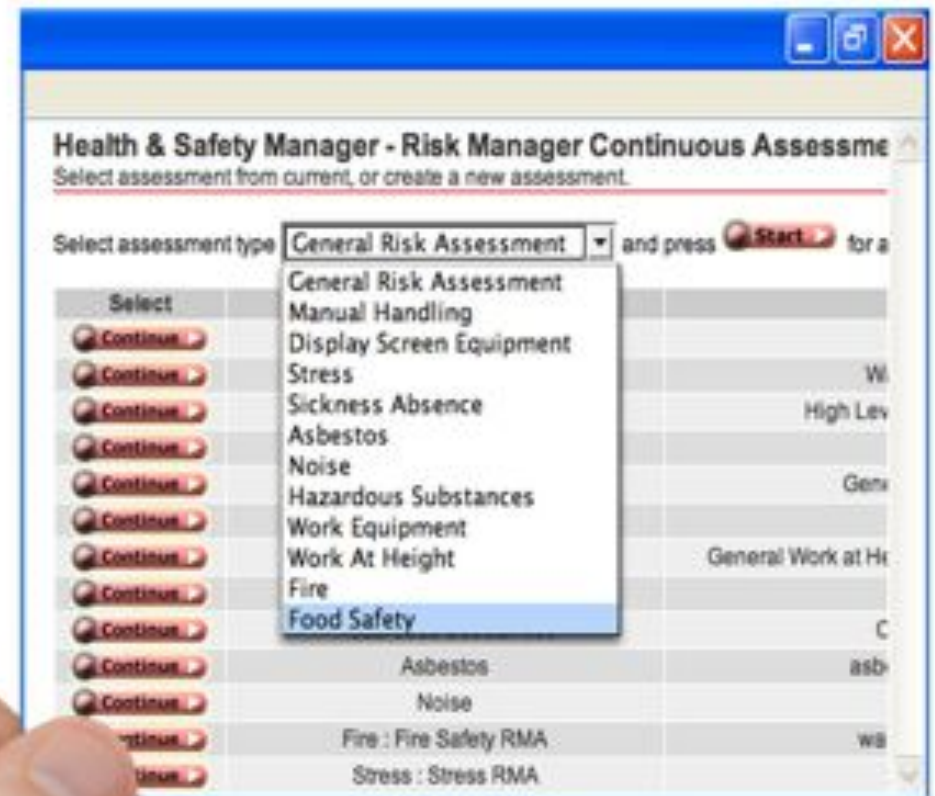

Online risk management module makes risk assessments & other compliance tasks easy

Human Focus provides a powerful risk management module that assists with the completion of tasks such as risk assessments.

For example, a suite of online risk assessment templates cover a wide range of hazard areas and makes the maintenance of necessary records straightforward. These online forms can also be accessed via any web-enabled phone or PDA device to support workplace based assessments.

However, as with all aspects of health and safety, risk assessments are only as good as the skills of the person completing them. And so, a suite of online training programmes provide risk assessment training. These sessions adopt a practical 'how-too' approach with many case study examples.

The risk assessment process is often derided. However, via Human Focus users are given both the understanding and the tools to help them get the job done quickly and effectively.

The Human Focus E-learning module provides one of the UK's largest online health and safety training resources.

Unlike many other E-learning systems, which rely on text and still pictures, Human Focus training is video-based. Video sessions are key to universal access. Many trainees struggle to learn via text only systems and some subjects demand video presentations for effective presentations.

Core training programmes are also available in foreign languages to support employees for whom English is not their first language.

Web-based E-learning systems in general provide enormous cost saving benefits. Via Human Focus, training can be completed on-demand - anywhere, anytime. Each session takes no longer than 30 minutes to complete and so enables a step-by-step approach to course completion. Staff can often fit such training into busy daily schedules - avoiding downtime or expensive 'training away days'.

RoSPA accredited training provides universal recognition & benchmarking

All Human Focus training courses are independently accredited by The Royal Society for the Prevention of Accidents (RoSPA). This means that RoSPA have checked and assured the technical content of the courses and that trainees receive a nationally recognised training award.

When trainees complete each training course they receive a RoSPA accredited certificate. The system enables trainees to build a training portfolio that will be widely recognised.

This independent accreditation by RoSPA is unique – they do not accredit any other E-learning system offering this range of training courses. Currently, Human Focus is believed to be the only E-learning system with this type of independent accreditation via a nationally recognised safety body.

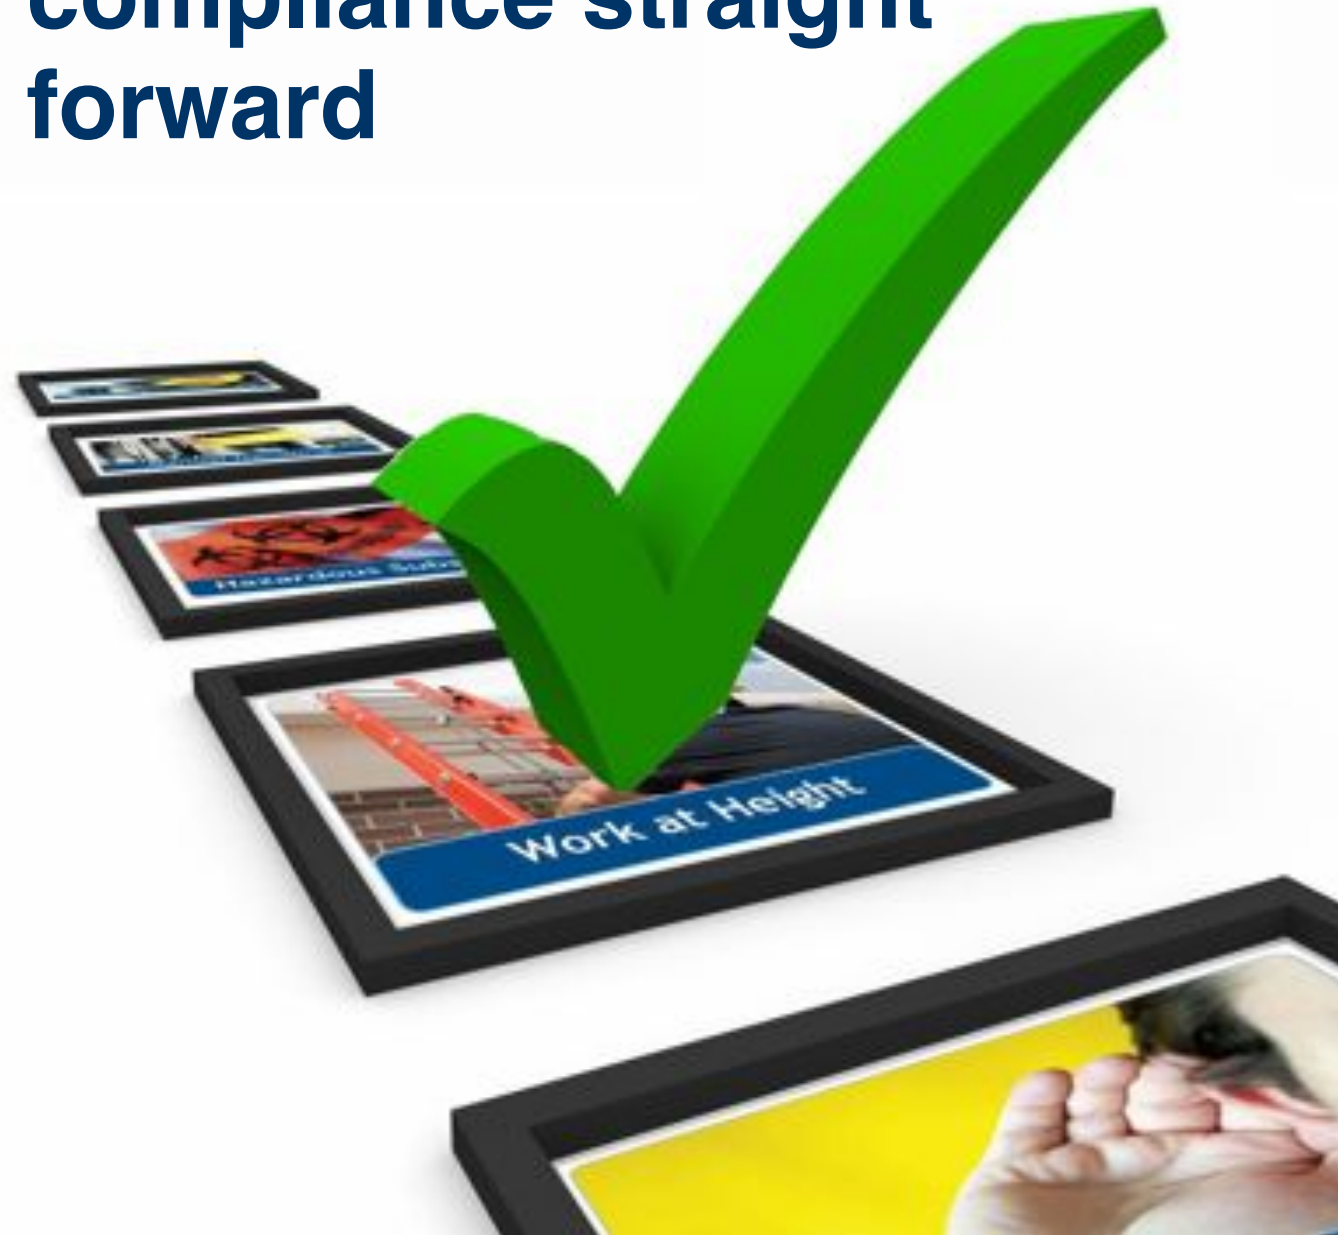

The central objective of Human Focus is to assist your organisation to comply with legislation quickly and effectively. It is a unique system that provides state of the art web-tools along with a comprehensive E-learning system.

Together, these elements can assist your organisation to cut costs whilst improving the standard of risk management.
